MONTHLY COMMENT

U.S. equities ended February lower. Sector performance showed a rotation out of technology, with basic materials, consumer defensive, and utilities emerging as the main gainers. Technology stocks struggled as Nvidia's strong quarterly results were not enough to ease concerns about AI-related investments and the need for broader market leadership. Producer prices rose more than expected: the producer price index increased by 0.5% in January and 2.9% year-over-year, signaling persistent inflation and suggesting that the Federal Reserve remains far from its 2% target. Services drove much of the increase, with final demand services rising 0.8% in January—the largest monthly gain since July.

In Europe, markets continued their positive momentum, with clear outperformance from energy, utilities, and consumer staples, supported by robust macroeconomic trends, an investment supercycle, and growing datacenter-related demand. European equities also acted as a safe haven from AI-related fears that were pressuring U.S. technology stocks.
